AGED GERMAN DEAD

Werner Koch, Veteran Journalist, Stricken in Home.

HAD BEEN ILL FOR TWO YEARS

In Last Week, However, Change for the Worse Defled the Efforts of the Physicians and the End Was Expected-Masonic Funeral Saturday Afternoon at the Residence,

Werner Koch, seventy-seven years old, United States. one of the oldest newspaper publishers in the country, owner and proprietor of the Washington Journal, the organ of the Country of the Cou German population of the Capital, died at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home, 27 R street northwest, after an illness of one week of tuberculosis.

Although arrangements have not been completed for the funeral, services will be held under Masonic auspices at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the family residence, and burial will be in the German Cemetery. The pallbearers will be announced to-day.

Years of Illness.

Mr. Koch, although he had been in illhealth for about two years, was able to be at his desk until he was forced to keep to his bed about a week ago. His condition, on account of age, became more serious every day, and death was not unexpected.

In the death of Mr. Koch Washington oses one of its most interesting citizens, a man, who through more than fifty years' association, became endeared to the German element of the city. He was born in Alsseld, Germany,

April 13, 1834, and came to Washington in 1854, where he obtained a position as printer. Being of a roving disposition in his early youth, Mr. Koch quit his business and shipped on a whaler, with which he remained for several years until he returned to Washington and started The Intelligenz Platt, a weekly Gernan paper, devoted to German interests. At the outbreak of the civil war, Mr Koch left the paper in the hands of his sociates, and joined the Eighth Battalion, District Volunteers, with the rank of captain. He did not serve the entire four years, and returned to Washington when his enlistment time ran out, to resume the editorship of his paper. So great was the success of the publication that in 1871 it appeared daily, and the name was changed to the Washington the name was changed to the Washington sent his paper daily to the presses, when companied by her daughter, Miss Ada- it appeared three days in the week. Pretty Alexandra Gives Her Age as Twenty-two Years, and Pourtales Insists His Title Be Inserted on Certificate.

Between blushes and smiles, pretty at least a couple of dozen of Counts de Countess Luise-Alexandra von Bernstorff, Pourtales who have taken American daughter of the German Ambassador, yesterday afternoon gave her age as twenty-two years, in reply to Col. Relew's question.

Col. Belew is in charge of the marriage license records at the City Hall, and the popular young countess, accomobtained the license for their wedding, Concordia Lutheran Church, where Rev. Paul A. Wenzel will officiate.

Count Raymond Pourtales insisted that his title, "count," be inserted on the marriage license register, and Mr. Belew nmodated the young diplomat, Subaltern of Guards.

The count is a subaltern of the First Regiment of Prussian Foot Guards, and is a stepson of that Countess Hermann Pourtales who was Miss Helen Barbey, of New York, and who divides her time between her home at Tuxedo and her place on the Lake of Geneva.
